Disclaimer: The software discussed in this article is no longer supported or updated. If you find a newer version, please let us know and we'll update the article. Browser Extension to Identify and Tag Web Pages Sometimes when browsing the Internet, you need to tag certain pages for later reference, or for discussion with a coworker. This is often the case when you want to book mark a page for later, or when you want to discuss a topic. If you are using Google Chrome, you can use the bookmark link at the top of the page to bookmark a page, and then use the Pin tab in the Tools menu to tag the page. If you are using Firefox, you can use the existing bookmarks, and use the new tab, or the various options in the Tools menu to tag a page. If you are using Internet Explorer, you can use the existing bookmarks, and use the Pin tab to tag the page. The above methods work well, but there is another way to tag a page that works well with all three browsers. This method requires the use of a browser extension, and it's free. If you are using Google Chrome, you can use the new tool provided by Google called ChromeBookmark. If you are using Firefox, you can use the new tool provided by Mozilla called FirefoxPin If you are using Internet Explorer, you can use the new tool provided by Microsoft called PinIt. All three of the above tools have other features. I'm only going to review the basic feature set that all three of the above tools have in common, and talk about the differences between the three.
